Re: New Part Numbers for 140V Battery Backup Accessory

Please note, effective immediately, part number 37228R for the 140V battery backup accessory has been obsoleted. Please use part number 41590R in its place.

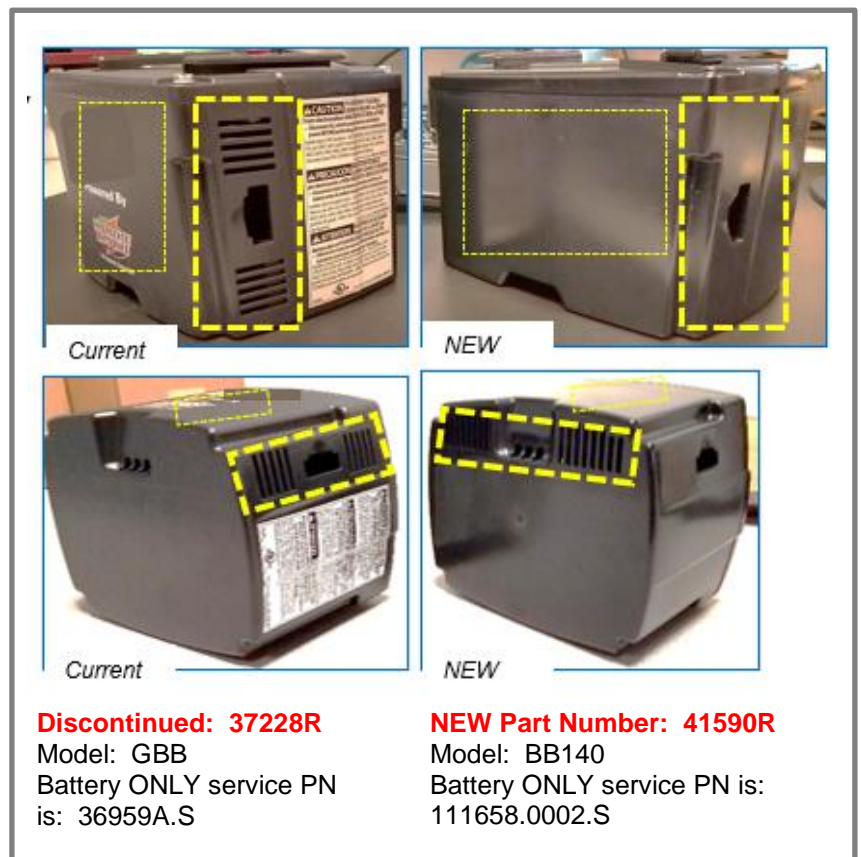

To allow for the consolidation of inventory and supply chain flexibility, we have moved all the battery backups to the same replacement battery service part number and removed all branding from the front of the case and external packaging.

Functionally: No changes

- There are no differences in the general purpose between the original accessory and the new battery backup accessory.
- There have been no changes to the powerhead or BBU functionality, so older BBU kits remaining in inventory can still be used with no issue.

Aesthetically: Minimal changes

- The vents that were previously located on the side of the unit are now on the bottom.
- There are is no branding on the accessory (this includes the shipping carton as well).

Replacement battery differences: The previous 140V battery backup accessory part number 37228R uses battery replacement service part number 36959A.S. The new battery backup accessory part number 41590R will use 111658.0002.S.

There is no price increase with the new part number. In addition, all BBU performance statements have been removed due to the volatility related to outside influences (such as age, weather, and frequency of use) and their impact on performance. If you have any concerns or questions, please contact your DSM or Customer Care Representative.
